DEDICATION

WILLIAM E. CARTER
1927–1983

William E. Carter, who provided the initial impetus for the creation of the third edition of the National Directory of Latin Americanists, died in August 1983, before it could be brought to completion. His untimely death has been a great loss to the world of Hispanic studies and to the Hispanic Division of the Library of Congress in particular. This volume is dedicated to his memory.

Dr. Carter was an internationally known anthropologist with years of experience in Latin America. He turned to the field of anthropology after serving, first in Uruguay and then in Bolivia, as a Methodist missionary and minister. After receiving a Bachelor of Sacred Theology degree from Boston University, Dr. Carter went on to study anthropology at Columbia University, where he earned an M.A. in 1958 and a Ph.D. in 1963.

Dr. Carter will be remembered for his work in many parts of Latin America; however, his life and career were most closely tied to Bolivia. Married to a native of Bolivia, Bertha García Roca, he returned to that country many times to conduct research. His study of the impact of the Bolivian agrarian reform on Aymara peasant communities was a pioneering effort in Andean anthropology. Most recently, from 1977 to 1980, he served as head of a multidisciplinary project to study the traditional use of coca leaf by the indigenous population. A number of his best-known works resulted from his research in Bolivia, among them Aymara Communities and the Bolivian Agrarian Reform, Bolivia: A Profile, and Irpa Chico: individuo y comunidad en la cultura aymara, the latter coauthored with the Bolivian anthropologist, Mauricio Mamani. An edited volume deriving from the coca study is to be published by the Institute for the Study of Human Issues.

Dr. Carter's work in other areas of Latin America includes research on the indigenous people of lowland Guatemala and a study of chronic marijuana use in Costa Rica which was sponsored by the National Institute on Drug Abuse. This work was carried out in association with the University of Florida, where Dr. Carter was professor of anthropology from 1962 to 1978. He served for many years as director of the University of Florida's Center for Latin American Studies, which he helped to make one of the foremost Latin American programs in the United States. The Guatemala research resulted in the book New Lands and Old Traditions: Kekchi Cultivators in the Guatemalan Lowlands, and the findings of the Costa Rican study were published in 1980 in a book edited and coauthored by Dr. Carter, Cannabis in Costa Rica.

In 1979, Dr. Carter came to Washington as the chief of the Hispanic Division of the Library of Congress, a post he held until his death on August 14, 1983. During the time that he was with the Hispanic Division, he organized numerous symposia, including a celebration of the 100th anniversary of the birth of the Spanish philosopher, José Ortega y Gasset, and an international conference marking the first millenium of the Spanish language. It was in his role as chief of the Hispanic Division that Dr. Carter worked to establish a special project for the compilation of the third edition of the National Directory of Latin Americanists and oversaw much of its preparation. Dr. Carter was involved in many other projects, including the planning for a national library in Panama and a guide to Hispanic manuscripts in U.S. collections. He was an active participant in the Seminar for the Acquisition of Latin American Library Materials, especially in planning for national library cooperation in collection development.

Dr. Carter was the recipient of many awards during his years of academic and government service. The Bolivian government awarded him the Cóndor de los Andes in 1979 in recognition of his dedication to teaching and research in that country. He received an honorary LL.D. from his alma mater, Muskingum College, in 1982. In 1983 he was honored by King Juan Carlos of Spain with the Knight's Cross of Isabel la Católica, and the University of Florida presented him with the President's Medallion for Distinguished Service. The prize which seemed to touch him the most deeply was one which he received only shortly before his death. It was a proclamation signed by the leaders of twenty-eight Aymara communities in the Department of La Paz, Bolivia, thanking Dr. Carter for his contribution to the world's understanding of their culture.

FOREWORD

The preparation of this third edition of the National Directory of Latin Americanists involved the participation of a number of individuals and institutions without whose support and work the volume could not have been compiled.

The idea to develop the third edition had been present for several years since 1970 but not until the 1980 grant proposal by Dr. William E. Carter, with strong encouragement from the Latin American Studies Association, was the project to become a reality. Dr. Carter's persistence in pursuing sources of funding, in the face of expressed interest but no support, was undoubtedly the major factor in bringing about this edition. The Tinker Foundation has been most generous in its support of the project as has been the Organization of American States, through its Cultural Division. Without these financial encouragements, the project, obviously, could not have been initiated.

But I would be remiss in not recognizing the tremendous human support and encouragement received from within the Library of Congress and from outside this institution that made the third edition of the National Directory of Latin Americanists a reality. The truly dedicated and professional contributions of the project director, Inge Harman, on whose shoulders fell numerous decisions, ensured the timely completion of the project; her masterful management of the project assured the high quality of the publication that you have before you. Her assistant, Cynthia Funk, provided consistently high level input to the project, as did John Dettor and Kim Caswell, who for many months of the project provided key inputting, reviewing, and verification functions.

The success of the project also is attributable to a relatively silent corps of specialists in the Library of Congress who gave freely of their time to provide wise counsel or technical expertise to ensure adequate equipment performance, contractual arrangements, reproduction support, and editorial and publishing advice. To all of these individuals, who will remain nameless, I extend my sincere gratitude.

Finally, with an ambivalent attitude, i.e., with sadness and delight, because I know he would have been delighted with the results of the project, I recognize the tireless efforts of Dr. William E. Carter, former chief of the Hispanic Division, who died in August 1983 and to whom this third edition is dedicated. The project to prepare the third edition of the National Directory of Latin Americanists was his project, and he participated in it closely, even to the week he died, as he reviewed questionnaires and lent his advice to the project staff. Without his dedication and leadership, the project would not have been completed in a timely fashion. He personified an important attribute of scholarship—he completed that which he began.

I hope that those of you who use this publication find that it provides the type and the quality of information that you seek. To those of us who were involved in the preparation of the volume it has been a rewarding project, one that we feel will be of significant benefit to the field of Latin American studies in the United States. The publication identifies the real growth in the study of all facets of Latin American culture and the particular strengths and weaknesses of that study in this country. Its true use, we feel, will include not only the obvious review of individual curriculum vitae but also the identification of discipline and country strengths and weaknesses among the community of scholars who study Latin America in the United States.

INTRODUCTION

This completely new, third edition of the National Directory of Latin Americanists brings together in one volume biographic and bibliographic data for 4,915 individuals with specialized knowledge of Latin America. Produced in the Hispanic Division of the Library of Congress, the Directory serves as the basic reference tool for information on Latin Americanist scholars and specialists working in the United States today. This third edition of the Directory, composed entirely of data newly gathered from active Latin Americanists, will benefit a broad range of users. Scholars, journalists, students—researchers of all kinds—will find it an invaluable resource in the study of the region. Extensive geographic and subject area indexes make this compendium particularly useful as a catalogue of current research, teaching, and work related to Latin America, and provide, at the same time, a composite view of the field of Latin American studies in the United States.

The idea of creating a nationwide directory of Latin Americanists grew out of a review of resources for the study of Latin America which was undertaken in the late 1950s by the Library's Hispanic Division (then Hispanic Foundation) staff, under the guidance of Hispanic Foundation director Howard F. Cline. A Library of Congress project to produce a national directory of Latin Americanists was funded in 1963 under Title VI of the National Defense Education Act. That first edition of the National Directory of Latin Americanists, published by the Library of Congress in 1966, listed 1,884 Latin American specialists in the social sciences and the humanities. A project to update and expand the Directory's coverage was begun in 1967 with funds from the Ford Foundation, again under the guiding hand of Dr. Cline. Compilation of data for the National Directory of Latin Americanists's second edition was completed in December 1970, and the volume, containing biographies of 2,695 specialists, was published by the Library of Congress in 1971.

Planning for a new, third edition of the Directory was undertaken by William E. Carter in 1979, soon after he became chief of the Hispanic Division. In consultation with the executive council of the Latin American Studies Association, Dr. Carter formulated a proposal for the creation of a National Directory of Latin Americanists Project, to be housed in the Hispanic Division. Through his determined efforts, the Library of Congress located two key Latin Americanist entities interested in supporting the compilation of a new edition of the National Directory. Major funding for the project was received from the Tinker Foundation, a private institution established by Edward Larocque Tinker to promote better understanding among the nations of this hemisphere and between the Americas and Iberian Europe. Additional funding for the project was provided by the Organization of American States. The Library's own contribution to the funding of the National Directory Project has been significant.

Work began on the National Directory third edition in July 1981, with the Project becoming fully staffed in September of that year. To collect data for the Directory, a questionnaire similar in structure to that used for compiling the two previous editions was circulated among professional Latin Americanists working in the United States. For this purpose, a comprehensive mailing list of approximately 17,000 names was compiled from hundreds of different sources. These included Latin American studies programs and concentrations at universities throughout the United States, Hispanist organizations, area specialty groupings of professional associations, guides to graduate departments, relevant journals, listings provided by national and international agencies, and rosters developed by individual scholars specifically for the Directory.

The National Directory Project is especially indebted to the Latin American Studies Association (LASA) for providing not only the mailing list of their membership but also copies of approximately 1,200 questionnaires which the LASA Secretariat had collected in a canvass of the Association's membership during 1980-81. These questionnaires supplied a valuable base of information for the third edition. The Project's mailing file was checked against Carl Deal's Latin America and the Caribbean: A Dissertation Bibliography and its supplement, Latin America and the Caribbean II: A Dissertation Bibliography, edited by Marian C. Walters. Addresses for many of the individuals not appearing on mailing lists were gleaned from the National Faculty Directory, 13th edition.

The mailing of the National Directory questionnaire began in November 1981 and continued during 1982 as new mailing lists were added to the existing file. Completed questionnaires began to be received early in 1982 and continued to arrive in large numbers throughout the year, in response to new mailings. Final canvassing was done during October, November, and December of 1982. Project efforts during 1983 were devoted principally to data preparation; however, questionnaires received during this period continued to be incorporated into Directory files. A follow-up mailing of the questionnaire to nonrespondents was not possible due to funding limitations. However, notices were placed in professional association newsletters, and announcements were sent to Latin American studies programs, encouraging Latin Americanists to complete the questionnaire they had received or, if they had been missed, to write to the Library of Congress for the form.

A total of 5,891 questionnaires were received by the National Directory Project. Of these, 4,915 are included as entries in the Directory. The criteria for inclusion follow the principles established in the previous editions of the Directory. Eligibility was limited to Latin Americanists of professional status, generally those individuals who hold the highest degrees in their disciplines. Final determination of eligibility was made by a panel composed of the editor and senior Hispanic Division staff. Nine hundred seventy-six respondents did not meet National Directory guidelines concerning education, area specialty, or residence in the United States. As these individuals complete their professional training, become more active in Latin Americanist organizations and research, or settle permanently in the United States, they may become eligible for future editions. Their questionnaires and supporting biographical materials will be maintained on file in the Hispanic Division, along with the files of those individuals included in the Directory, for consultation by Library reference staff and by interested scholars for research purposes.

The core of the National Directory of Latin Americanists are scholars in the humanities and the social sciences, with historians, specialists in Latin American literature, anthropologists, economists, and political scientists represented in the largest numbers. Scholars in these disciplines comprise approximately 60 percent of the Directory entries. Geographers, sociologists, linguists, and specialists in education, library science, and language make up another 20 percent of the volume. Another 10 percent of the entries consists of smaller numbers of specialists and scholars in the fields of art and art history, business, women's studies, Latin American studies, psychology, urban and regional planning, law, public administration, musicology, religion and theology, communication, journalism, architecture, philosophy, and computer science.

The scope of the National Directory has been broadened for this new edition to encompass specialists in Latin American agriculture and natural resources management, as well as other physical and biological scientists who actively define themselves as Latin Americanists through their work and research in the region. This change in policy from the previous editions recognizes the growing importance in Latin America of research in the areas of tropical and high altitude agriculture, nutrition, public health, energy use, forestry, and water management, among others. Specialists in these and other physical and biological fields comprise the remaining 10 percent of this new edition of the Directory.

Twelve new fields were canvassed for the third edition of the National Directory. In addition to the broad categories of biological and physical sciences, these were agriculture, demography, economic development, ethnohistory, folklore, natural resources management, nutrition, public health, urban studies, and women's studies. New subdivisions have been added as well to existing fields to make the Directory's index more useful. For example, the field of geography has been divided into cartography, human geography, and physical geography; the field of education into adult and continuing education, educational administration, kindergarten through 12th grade, university education, and so forth. Latin American studies has been included as a field of study in this edition, and it appears as a category in the index. Under this heading are grouped directors of Latin American studies programs and centers, as well as individuals with advanced degrees in that interdisciplinary specialty.

Fields of Study Represented in the National Directory of Latin Americanists, third edition

Entries are arranged alphabetically by name. They are indexed at the close of the volume by discipline and by geographical area. As in the earlier editions, a standard entry contains the following information in the order given:

Name, birthplace, birthdate
Major discipline (in upper case)
Degrees, including honorary ones
Professional career (with present position in upper case)
Fellowships, honors, consultantships, officerships, editorships
Membership in professional and honorary organizations
Research specialties (limited to three)
Publications (limited to three)
Language knowledge, based on the scale discussed below
Home and/or office addresses

In the presentation of the data outlined above, the major concern has been clarity and intelligibility, so that the volume can be used profitably by the student, journalist, librarian, or foreign scholar unfamiliar with the field of Latin American studies, as well as by the Latin American specialist. For this reason the use of abbreviations and acronyms has been kept to a minimum. A limited number of acronyms which occur with great frequency, such as those representing major Latin American studies organizations and large professional associations, has been employed, when no possibility for confusion with other entities existed. A listing of these is included in the table of abbreviations.

The information within each category is presented chronologically with as little repetition as possible. If a degree, position, or fellowship is listed with a date, but without an institutional affiliation, the information refers to the previous item. Professional training, research, and work experience outside the United States, and especially activities in the Latin American region, are specified by country whenever possible and given in parentheses after each item.

Under the heading "Language," contributors have rated their competence in languages other than English on a scale of one to five, in four categories: reading, understanding the spoken language, speaking, and writing. A rating of one indicates minimal competency, two is fair, three is good, four is excellent, and a rating of five indicates native fluency. Thus "Spanish 5,4,3,2" indicates that the individual reads Spanish with the ease of a native speaker, that his or her understanding of the spoken language is excellent, and that he or she speaks the language well and writes it with fair proficiency.

The Project staff has exerted great care in converting the questionnaire data into finished bio-bibliographical profiles. When information supplied in a questionnaire or accompanying biographical materials was incomplete or inconsistent, the Library of Congress Computerized Catalogue and standard reference sources were consulted to locate the missing information. Inquiries were also made, when necessary, by mail or telephone directly to the contributors. In no sense, however, can the entries be considered to have been officially "verified" by the Library of Congress.

The National Directory Project utilized two Compucorp microcomputers outfitted with Omega word processing equipment for the compilation and storage of National Directory records. The data was structured so as to permit automated transmission from the diskettes on which it was stored to the Library's electronic typesetting equipment. This equipment—a Compugraphic composition unit—was operated by the Library's Central Services Division. With the very able assistance of the Central Services' Composing Unit staff, the National Directory was converted directly to page proofs from the data recorded on the word processor diskettes. A specially designed coding system was used when inputting the data to accommodate the diacritics in the material and permit their automatic transmission to the typesetter, as well as to produce the desired paragraphing and spacing. The completed page proofs were reviewed by the Library's Publishing Office which then assumed responsibility for the publication of the volume.

The Directory diskette archive will be maintained in the Hispanic Division of the Library of Congress. Plans are being formulated by the Library's Automated Systems Office to store the Directory third edition data on tapes compatible with the Library's main computer. At some future time it may be possible to convert these records into a data base accessible to the public for key word searching through the Library's computer terminals.

The National Directory Project wishes to express its appreciation to the many individuals and organizations whose contributions made the third edition possible. One hundred thirty Latin American studies programs across the United States responded to our requests for the names and addresses of Latin Americanists affiliated with their institutions. Special thanks go to the Latin American Studies Center at Michigan State University, the Stanford-Berkeley Joint Center for Latin American Studies, the Latin American Institute at the University of New Mexico, the Center for Latin American Studies at Tulane University, the Tri-University Center of Latin American Studies in Kansas, the Joint Center for Latin American Language and Area Studies of the University of Chicago and the University of Illinois, and the Center for Latin American Studies at Arizona State University for providing the National Directory Project with copies of the directories of Latin Americanists which they had compiled for their areas.

Mailing lists were provided to the Project by many professional associations, foremost among these the Latin American Studies Association and its regional councils—

NECLAS, MACLAS, IAC, SECOLAS, SCOLAS, MALAS, NYSLA, NCCLA, RMCLAS, and PCCLAS. Mailing lists were also supplied by a large number of other Latin Americanist associations, including the Conference of Latin Americanist Geographers, the Conference on Latin American History, the Society for Latin American Anthropology, the Seminar on the Acquisition of Latin American Library Materials, the Inter-American Society of Psychology, the Society for Iberian and Latin American Thought, the Caribbean Studies Association, the Programa Interamericano de Lingüística y Enseñanza de Idiomas, the Association for Latin American Art, the Sociedad Latinoamericana de Nutrición, the Centro de Estudios de la Realidad Puertorriqueña, and the Inter-American Press Association.

Mailing labels for Latin America area specialty groupings, membership directories, and guides to graduate departments were purchased from a number of large professional associations to complement the lists mentioned above. These included lists and directories from the American Anthropological Association, the American Economic Association, the American Historical Association, the American Political Science Association, the American Sociological Association, the Association of American Geographers, the Linguistic Society of America, the Modern Language Association of America, the Population Association of America, and the Rural Sociological Society.

Mailing lists were also acquired from other types of Latin Americanist entities. These included the Organization of American States, the Smithsonian Tropical Research Institute, the Inter-American Foundation, the Pan American Health Organization, the Inter-American Development Bank, the University of Florida Amazon Research Project, the Hispanic American Historical Review, Latin American Perspectives, and Latin American Indian Literatures. A number of organizations and agencies not strictly Latin Americanist in focus but with strong interest in the region also compiled lists of names of individuals to be canvassed for the Directory. These included the Comparative and International Education Society, the International Society of Foresters, the World Bank, the U.S. Agency for International Development, the U.S. Department of Agriculture, the Smithsonian Institution, the Harvard Institute for International Development, and Oxfam America.

The National Directory of Latin Americanists Project acknowledges with gratitude the generous contributions of the Tinker Foundation and the Organization of American States. We wish especially to express our deeply felt appreciation to Tinker Foundation president Martha T. Muse for the Foundation's sustained support of the third edition project and her commitment to its successful completion. The staff of the National Directory Project would like to thank the other members of the Hispanic Division for their unflagging assistance during the time that the third edition was being compiled. We all owe a special debt of gratitude to Dr. Carter, whose initiative, resourcefulness, and determination made the Project a reality.
